

Our identity

What is French Pulp?

Pulp, alludes to the serialised novels of the past, which for centuries have filled our imagination with hard-boiled detectives, femmes fatales, nonchalant spies and familiar heroes. From the hard-boiled novel to the family saga through the space opera, these have given birth to dynamic, generous literature that is greatly enjoyed by all who read it, thanks to its punchy, smooth-flowing texts.

French, refers to the fact that there exists a French school of this literary genre. Popular and addictive, its heritage deserves to be defended and its future renewed. This is the mission of French Pulp, which publishes not only cult French airport novels (G.-J. Arnaud, André Lay, Francis Ryck, etc.) but also works by new, exclusively French-language authors, who are breathing new life into a genre accustomed to success.

Why choose a name in English?

Is it wise to have an English name for a publishing house that defends the French language? Is not the best form of defence attack? To defend our language and distribute the works of our authors abroad, this name is a nod that sets the tone, inviting you to tremble with excitement as you read thrillers, best-sellers and other feel-good books! At French Pulp, works by all our authors are translated and distributed around the world, in order to promote our popular culture.

A committed publishing house

You are not the only ones to devour these books that you read standing in the tube, that you cannot put down at night before you fall asleep and that withstand sunlight and sand. Each month, our new releases will be sponsored by celebrities who are also enthralled by the suspense, the wonders and even the modernity of these stories. And since we at French Pulp believe in commitment, for each of our celebrities' favourites, some of the profits from the sale of the book will go directly to the association of their choice.
